Business Facilities: Coronavirus Mission Statement

Like everyone in our economic development community, Business Facilities is bracing for impact with the COVID-19 epidemic that is spreading rapidly across the United States.

We’re making sure that our work processes conform to the urgent national need for social distancing, with new work-at-home, travel and sick leave policies that put safety first as we produce our magazine via a remote digital workflow.

We’re also adjusting our priorities, so that everything Business Facilities does during this unprecedented crisis is focused on the most urgent needs of the community we serve.

For the duration of this crisis, Business Facilities magazine and BusinessFacilities.com will provide the vital information every location needs to meet the COVID-19 challenge head on, to prevail and to recover together. We’ll do our best to be a beacon of reliability as we navigate our way through uncharted waters.

Our platform is your platform and we are your voice. Tell us what you are doing to confront this crisis and help us showcase the best practices so that everyone can adopt them. Use us to communicate with each other. We’ll shine our spotlight on the locations who’ve found innovative ways to maintain the viability of their communities while we all hunker down.

After the global financial crisis hit in 2008, Business Facilities was imbedded in locations who found creative ways to maximize their resources and rekindle growth in tough times. They never gave up, and they lifted the USA back onto its pedestal as the world’s greatest economy.

We know that today’s challenge may be bigger and even more dangerous to everything we cherish, but we’re also confident that the courage of our community has not diminished.

We’ll get through this together.

Ted Coene
Co-President
Group C Media